MISCELLANY.

ROBINSON THE MURDERER.

The New York Herald gives the following further particulars relative to the horrible murder committed by Robinson upon Miss Jewett:—

Richard P. Robinson, the alleged perpetrator of this most horrid deed, had for some time been in the habit of keeping (as it is termed) a girl named Ellen Jewett, who has for a long period resided at No. 41 Thomas street, in the house kept by Rosina Townsend.

Having, as he suspected, some cause for jealousy, he went to the house on Saturday night as appears, with the intention of murdering her, for he carried a hatchet with him. On going up into her room, quite late at night, he mentioned his suspicions, and expressed a determination to quit her, and demanded his watch and miniature together with some letters which were in her possession. She refused to give them up, and he then drew from beneath his cloak the hatchet, and inflicted upon her head three blows, either of which must have proved fatal, as the bone was cleft to the extent of three inches in each place.

She died without a struggle; and the cold blooded villain deliberately threw off his cloak, cast the lifeless body upon the bed and set fire to that. He then ran down stairs unperceived by any person, went out of the back door and escaped in that manner.

In a short time Mrs Townsend was roused by the smell of smoke—she rushed up stairs and saw the bed on fire and the mangled body of the unfortunate girl upon it. She ran down, raised the alarm, and the watchmen rushing to the spot, rescued the body and preserved the house from being consumed.

Robinson's cloak was in the room, and at once they suspected the murderer. Mr Noble, the assistant Captain of the Watch, instantly went and aroused Mr Brink. They received such information as the horror stricken inmates could afford them, and proceeded on their search. On Sunday morning, at seven o'clock, Robinson was arrested in bed at his boarding house, No 42 Dey street, and brought at once to the house where had been committed the foul deed.

On seeing the body he exhibited no signs of emotion, but gazed around and on his victim coolly and calmly. The Coroner was summoned, a Jury formed, and on a patient examination of the testimony, they returned a verdict that "she came to her death by blows upon the head inflicted with a hatchet, by Richard P. Robinson."

Robinson is a native of one of the Eastern States, aged 19, and remarkably handsome and intelligent, and has been for some time past in the employ of Joseph Hoxie, 101 Maiden Lane. But his conduct upon this occasion, must stamp him as a villain of too black a die for mortal. Of his intentions there can be no doubt, for he took the hatchet with him, with which the murder was committed, and the deed done, he attempted to destroy all evidence of his guilt, by firing the house, and thus induce the public to believe that she had perished in the flames. He is very well and highly connected, and the sad news that must soon reach his parents' ears may be fatal to them.

Ellen Jewett was a finely formed and most beautiful girl—a girl about twenty years of age, and endowed by nature and education with talents and accomplishments which should have saved her from her ignominious situation.

On his examination before the Coroner's Jury, Robinson denied himself and his name, and asserted that he had not been in the house that night; but a woman was brought from his boarding house, who swore positively to his cloak. The fact of his having carried the hatchet with him, is substantiated, by there being a piece of twine attached to his button hole, which tallied precisely with a piece attached to the handle of the hatchet. On leaving the house yesterday, he leaped lightly into the carriage which was to carry him to Bridewell, his countenance clear, calm, and untroubled, and on being put into his cell, his last request was for some cigars to smoke. The remains of the poor unfortunate victim will be interred this day.

Visit to the Scene.—Yesterday afternoon, about 4 o'clock, the sun broke out for a moment in splendor. I started on a visit to the scene at 41 Thomas street. On passing through Chapel street, I came to the corner of Thomas street, which runs west from behind the Hospital yard to Hudson street. A large crowd of young men stood around the door, No. 41, and several groups along the street in various directions. The excitement among the young men throughout the city was beginning to spread in all directions.

The house is a large four story elegant double one, painted yellow, and on the left hand side as you go to Hudson street. It is said to be one of the most splendid establishments devoted to infamous intercourse that the city can show. I knocked at the door. A Police officer opened it stealthily. I told him who I was, "Mr B. you can enter," said he, with great politeness. The crowds rushed from behind seeking also an entrance.

"Why do you let that man in?" asked one of the crowd.

"He is an editor—he is on public duty."

I entered—I pressed forward to the sitting room or parlor. There I found another Police officer in charge of that apartment. The old lady of the house, Mrs. Townsend, was sitting on a sofa, talking to several young men, in a great state of excitement. She was describing what Ellen had said—how she discovered the fire—how she made an alarm—how she called for the watch. The room was elegantly furnished with mirrors, splendid paintings, sofas, ottomans, and every variety of costly furniture. The Police officer when he saw me said—"Mr B. would you like to see the place?"

"I would," replied I.

"He immediately rose—I followed him. We mounted an elegant stair-case—dark and gloomy, being in the centre of a large double house. On reaching the second story, the Police officer took a key from his pocket—and opened the door. What a sight burst upon me! There stood an elegant double mahogany bedstead, all covered with burnt pieces of linen, pillows, black as cinders. I looked around for the object of my curiosity. On the carpet I saw a piece of linen sheet covering something as if carelessly flung over it.

"Here," said the Police officer, "here is the poor creature."

"See," said the police officer, "she has assumed that appearance within an hour."

It was the first process of dust returning to dust.—The countenance was calm and passionless. Not the slightest appearance of emotion was there. One arm lay over her bosom—the other was inverted, and hanging over her head. The left side down to the waist, where the fire had touched, was bronzed like an antique statue. For a few moments I was lost in admiration at this extraordinary sight—a beautiful female corpse—that surpassed the finest statue of antiquity. I was recalled to her horrid destiny by seeing the dreadful bloody gashes on the right temple, which must have caused instantaneous dissolution.

I then looked round the room. It was elegant, but wild and extravagant in its ornaments. On the drawers was a small library, composed of light novels, poetry, and monthly periodicals. There hung on the wall a beautiful print of Lord Byron as the presiding genius of the place. The books were Byron, Scott, Bulwer's works, and the Knickerbocker.

A work table in a state of disorder, stood near by. It was covered with fragments, pen, ink, paper, crayons, pamphlets, &c. &c. Above the mantel piece hung several theatrical fancy sketches.

I returned to take a last look at the corpse. What a melancholy sight for beauty, wit, and talent, for it is said she possessed all, to come to such a fatal end!

I came down stairs—the house looked dark and gloomy, all the windows being half shut—but it was throughout splendidly furnished.

Such is the scene as it was seen yesterday afternoon. This extraordinary murder has caused a sensation in this city never before felt or known. I understand that a large number of fashionable young men, clerks, and others, were caught in the various apartments by the Police, when the cry of fire was given. It was Saturday night. The murdered girl was one of the most beautiful of her degraded caste. She was a perfect Millwood. She has seduced by her beauty and blandishments more young men than any known in the Police Records. She was a remarkable character, and has come to a remarkable end. The house is in danger from the mob. Let the authorities look to it. A morbid excitement pervades the city. It is said that she threatened to expose Robinson, when she lived, having discovered that he was paying attention to a respectable young lady. This threat drove him to madness. On Saturday she walked up and down Broadway half the day, nodding to her acquaintances among the dissipated young men.

In what a horrible condition is a portion of the young men of this devoted city!

BOSTON MORNING POST.

THURSDAY, APRIL 14, 1836.

The Beauties of Common Law.—Few persons are acquainted with the original beauties of the English common law, under the mask of which a tyrannical bench are enforcing their own opinion as law, and compelling citizens to submit to the operation of these illegal and ex post facto laws. We quote a description of the common law, which Mr S. D. Parker had the assurance to read to a Boston Jury, in the trial of Mr Kneeland, and to insist that it was then the law of this Commonwealth, and by which he attempted to convict Mr Kneeland of a crime, and send him to the State's Prison:—

"Lord Hale says there is no complete series of acts of Parliaments, or of judicial decisions, so that usage and custom, judicial decisions, and resolutions and acts of Parliament, though not now extant, might introduce some new laws, and alter some old, which we now take to be the very common law itself, though the time and precise periods of such alterations are not explicitly or clearly known."

When such jargon and nonsense is gravely introduced as law by a public prosecutor, and as solemnly sustained by the Court, and by the aid and authority of which it is attempted to send citizens to the State's Prison, who only exercise their constitutional rights of the press, is it not time to inquire if the judicial system be not rotten and corrupt beyond the hope of cure or repair? To show the kind of frauds, and the degree of ignorance, by which the common law has been manufactured in England, we quote from Mr Jefferson an account of the manner in which christianity and religion in general were made "part and parcel of the common law," and to speak or write against which was made punishable by their courts.

Judge Thatcher sustained this contemptible doctrine of the common law, a doctrine at war with common sense and common honesty, in Mr Kneeland's trial; but the scorn with which the public has received the decision, and the air of ridicule which Mr Jefferson's narrative of the history of this law, has thrown upon the subject, has, we believe, strange as it may seem, brought a blush even upon the faces of the bench, and we may now look upon the common law maxim "that christianity and religion are part and parcel of the law, and that to speak against them, is an offence at common law," to be no longer common law. It is defunct, exploded, and repealed, in effect, by the power that enacted it, the Bench. They will sustain it no more.

Mr Jefferson, than whom there is none more competent to give a correct account, thus describes the manner in which the Holy Scriptures, religion and christianity, came to be considered parts of the common law, in his letter to Major Cartwright, dated June 5, 1824. See his Works, vol. 4. p. 397.

"I was glad to find in your book a formal contradiction, at length of the judiciary usurpation of legislative powers; for such the Judges have usurped in their repeated decisions that christianity is a part of the common law. The proof of the contrary which you have adduced, is incontrovertible: to wit, that the common law existed while the Anglo Saxons were yet Pagans, at a time when they had never heard the name of Christ pronounced, or knew that such a character ever existed. But it may amuse you to show when

Car, eed common ley sur quela tons manners leis sont fondez. Et nury sir, nous sommes obliges de connoître la ley de Saint Eglise; et semblablement ila sont obliges de connoître nostre ley. Et, sir, si poit apparet a nous que l'evenue ad fait come un ordinary, fons en tiel cas, adong nous devons ces adjuer bon on autement nemy, &c. See Fitch. Abr. Qu. imp. 89. Bro. Abr. Qu. imp. 12. Fitch in his first book c. 3, is the first afterwards who quotes this case and mistakes it thus:—To such laws of the Church as have warrant in Holy Scripture, our law gives credence; and to such laws as these of holy church have in ancient writing, it is proper for us to give credence—to wit, to their ancient written laws. This was in 1613, a century and a half after the dictum of Pricot. Wingate, in 1658, repeats this false translation into a maxim of common law, copying the words of Fitch, but citing Pricot—Wing. Max. 3; and Sheppard, title Religion, in 1675, copies the same mistranslation quoting the Y. Book, Fitch and Wingate. Hale expresses it in these words, "Christianity is parcel of the laws of England." Vent. 293-3 Kob. 609. But he quotes no authority. By this echoing and re-echoing from one to another, it had become so established in 1728, that in the case of the King vs. Woolston, 2 Stra. 834, the Court would not suffer it to be debated whether to write against Christianity was punishable in a temporal Court at common law, pp. 405. Wood therefore ventures still to vary the phrase and say, that all blasphemy and profaneness are offences by the common law, and cites 2 Stra. Then Blackstone, in 1763, vol. IV, pp. 59, repeats the words of Hale, that Christianity is part of the laws of England, citing Ventris and Strange. And finally Lord Mansfield, with a little qualification, in Evan's case in 1767, says, that the essential principles of revealed religion are parts of the common law, thus engulfing Bible, Testament, and all, into the common law, without citing any authority. And thus we find this chain of authorities hanging, link by link, one upon another, all ultimately upon one and the same work, and that a mistranslation of the words ancient scripture, used by Pricot. Fitch quotes Pricot—Wingate does the same—Sheppard quotes Pricot, Fitch and Wingate—Hale cites nobody—the Court in Woolston's case cites Hale—Wood cites Woolston's case—Blackstone quotes Woolston's case and Hale, and Lord Mansfield, like Hale, ventures it on his own authority. Here I might defy the best read lawyer to produce another scrip of authority for this judicial forgery, and I might go on further to show how some of the Anglo-Saxon Priests interpolated into the texts of Alfred's laws, the 20th, 21st, 22d, and 23d chapters of Exodus, and the 15th of the Acts of the Apostles, from the 23d to 29th verses. But this would lead my pen and your patience too far. What a conspiracy this between Church and State.

When such a law is enforced—a law predicated on the mistranslation of an expression, in Norman French, used by Chief Justice Pricot, about the year A. D. 1458, of "ancient scripture," which simply meant, as used by him, old records, or ancient written law, holy writ—in other words, the Bible; and this is what Judge Thacher, two years ago, decided to be law in Massachusetts—is it not quite time, not only to reform the Bench, but to remodel the Judicial System? When such errors are made the law, which the Bench enforce upon our citizens, the scorn felt for their intelligence is absorbed by indignation at their turpitude. A system that permits such vicious interpolations, must be radically and irreparably defective. The safety of the community requires a new judicial system—one that shall bring the good sense of the people to correct the errors and wrongs of the Bench.

The Providence Journal, of Wednesday, gives the particulars of a most bloody tragedy which occurred in that city on Monday. A man by the name of Ball, who had been confined in jail for abusing his family, was liberated a few days since, on the condition that he would immediately leave the place—

"This condition (says the Journal) he neglected to fulfil, and on Monday last, in a state of intoxication, he again visited his family, and treated his children with so great rudeness, that they sent for their mother, who was employed at a neighbor's house. She came to the protection of her children, several of whom are very small, and endeavoring in vain to suppress his inhuman conduct, she attempted to force him out of doors.—While engaged in this attempt to put him out of the house, he drew a knife and made two desperate stabs at her body, each of which inflicted a deep wound, the latter ripping open her abdomen, so that her bowels immediately gushed out. In this condition, supporting her bowels upon her hands, she ran through the street for succor. The cold-blooded fiend went away to the house of a relative, where he borrowed a razor, and after sharpening it, made a cowardly and unsuccessful attempt to cut his own throat, inflicting a wound which is by no means dangerous.

The unfortunate woman is still living, but probably will not long survive. She is the mother of nine children, and sustains an excellent character in the neighborhood where she lives.

The inhuman monster has since been lodged in jail to await his trial and the penalty due his crime. He says he only regrets that he had not killed his wife and also a son and daughter against whom he indulges the most venomous hate. We understand he is between fifty and sixty years of age."

The dam across the Tonawanda creek, at Buffalo, and the toll bridge below, were carried away on the 4th, by the pressure of the water, which is higher than at any previous time since the completion of the dam. Two canal boats, and immense quantities of round and square timber, were also carried down the creek and lost.—Fears were also entertained that several stores and buildings, on the strip of land between the creek and the canal, will also be destroyed, the earth having been washed away to within a few feet of them. The navigation of the canal, at that end, will be retarded for at least a month.

Consoling.—In these times of complaint at the high price of provisions, the editor of the N. Y. Transcript finds consolation in the fact that they have been higher. He says—

"It appears from an edict of Dioclesian, passed A. D. 303, for fixing the prices of food and labor throughout the empire, that meat was sold at the following rates per pound:—beef at 32 1-2 cents of our money; mutton 32 1-2 cents; lamb 50 cents; pork 50 cents; pigs feet 16 1-2 cents; a sausage of fresh pork, an ounce in weight, 8 1-4 cents; a fat male peacock, (for the table) at nearly 11 dollars!"

The Journal of Commerce, of Tuesday evening, says—"Many of the Masons have struck to-day for higher wages. They could not have selected a better time, as there are many more hands here than could find employment, even at the old prices."

One of the New York watchmen, named Luber, has died of the wounds received during the fight which took place at the arrest of Chickster, and two or three of his gang.

The Lazaretto Warehouse, situated about three miles from Baltimore, and owned by the U. States, was destroyed by fire a few days since.

"Every paper but ours justified the State Bank in refusing to testify," says the Boston Advocate.—We were surprised to see one who professes to be so great a lover of truth, guilty of so erroneous a statement. The Post never "justified the State Bank in refusing to testify," but reprehended its conduct in that particular as decidedly as the Advocate did. Whether this false statement is made through carelessness by the Advocate, or for the unmanly purpose of injuring us by wilful misrepresentation, it is equally at war with the vaunted regard for truth and justice which is ever upon its lips. The Advocate would do well to indulge in a little retrospection before it arrogates to itself all the honesty, consistency, and fearlessness to be found in the public press. Did it not justify the United States Bank in refusing to testify before a committee of Congress, by supporting Mr Edward Everett, who was one of that committee, and who in his minority report to Congress argued in favor of the conduct of the Bank? Where is there a paper that has been more unsparing and unequivocal in its praise of the public conduct of Mr Everett than the Advocate, or has urged his example more vehemently as worthy of all imitation? Why slumbered its love for the "supremacy of the laws" when this apologist and justifier of the contumacy they received under circumstances precisely parallel to the case which now arouses its indignation, was candidate for the office of first administrator of the laws in this commonwealth? We go for the "supremacy of the laws," whether they be violated by Nicholas Biddle or Ezra A. Bourne.

If any thing should lead us to suspect the Advocate's purity, it would be the constant necessity it appears to feel of proclaiming its moral superiority over all around it. It says it can afford to speak the truth, which no other city paper can. Here is a most gross, illiberal, and ungentlemanly charge upon every one of its contemporaries. The boast of the Advocate that it does not owe a single dollar to any bank, is intended to deceive—it is a paltry quibble, very unbecoming a journal which would fain be thought so immaculate. How stands the fact—the Advocate is owned by eighty or one hundred individuals—men in business, and as much connected with Banks, and dependant upon banking facilities, as their neighbors—hence, the proprietors of the Advocate are interested to as great an extent in Banks, and far greater, than the proprietors of any other newspaper in the city of Boston or New England.

We have foreborne to notice the covert attacks of the Advocate upon us for some time, but we should be unjust to ourselves and our political associates to pass them over in silence any longer. The dictatorial and arrogant tone assumed by this journal towards a party with whom it does not pretend to act but partially, has not unfrequently excited disgust and indignation among its members. If it be honest in its pretensions to uncommon patriotism, we think the public are keen-sighted and just enough to discover and acknowledge its rare virtues without being told of them so often. There is an old adage which is none the worse for its antiquity, which we commend to the Advocate's notice, viz: "Self praise goes but little ways."

STENOGRAPHIC GLIMPSSES OF CONGRESS.

Washington, April 8, 1836.

Senate.—Judge Ruggles, of Maine, presented some resolutions on his Legislature on the subject of slavery, deprecating the course of the abolitionists, and conceding to the Slave States the right of regulating their own internal policy. Notwithstanding their conciliatory nature, they produced an animated debate. In submitting them, Judge R. made a few appropriate remarks, tending to propitiate the "generous South;" but they had quite a contrary effect, for Mr Calhoun not only cross-questioned the Judge, but uttered an angry philippic against every body who wished to calm and quiet the slave holders.

The truth is, they are determined not to be satisfied with any thing on the subject; for it is against the political interest of the demagogues and agitators to be satisfied with any assurance or sacrifice that can be made for them. It is time and labor lost, to make any attempt at conciliation.

Mr Brown replied to Mr Calhoun, and made a home charge against him and his clique, of dormant partnership with Arthur Tappan & Co., not by name, but inuendo.—Calhoun spoke of the petitions as charging the slave-holders with being "robbers, murderers, and pirates." Mr Brown denied the charge, saying that no petition he had heard read contained any such epithets; and challenged him to produce them. Calhoun could not do it, and had to take his seat, under the imputation of making a "violent and direct attack on truth!"

Mr Brown spoke in a conciliatory manner; Mr Mangum in a supercilious one; and Mr Brown told him that it would be time enough for him to instruct others in their duty, when he had learnt to obey the instructions of his own constituents. It made a great laugh—Mangum blustered like a "mahogany stock," but lung fire, and never went off after this bit.

Mr Walker spoke, advising the ladies to sign no more petitions; for he thought it was indelicate, unbecoming, and inappropriate.

House.—The Wisconsin Territory bill was discussed, and passed.

REIS EFFENDI.

Washington, April 9, 1836.

The Senate adjourned yesterday to Monday. Mr Webster has not yet returned. His "ten days" leave of absence will not probably expire till the end of three weeks. Time and tide don't wait for every man.

The House have been debating a petition of Dr Gale, of New York, for remuneration for his "Pea-patch," an island in the Delaware, ceded to Uncle Sam for a fort.—The Dr asks $17,000 for it; and after $50,000 have been spent in it date, probably they will grant his petition.

The news from Texas this evening, via New Orleans, has caused a great sensation. I have not seen the account, but only heard of it; and as it has varied with every informant, I shall not undertake to make any statement, lest I might play a new variation. I will simply add, that San Antonio is said to be captured by Santa Anna. The New Orleans Bee, I understand, contains the particulars.

REIS EFFENDI.

From Florida.—A letter from Volusia, dated 27th March, says the left wing of the army of Florida crossed the St Johns on the 26th ult., and proceeded on the 27th to the seat of war. Col. Butler's Command, for whose safety so much anxiety was manifested, has returned safely. Their detention was caused by bad roads. Three guides arrived that day from St Augustine, to accompany the army. Gen. Macomb was going up the St John's towards Picolata, on the 31st of March.—No other news.

POLICE COURT.

Mrs Rebecca Read, a colored dame in advanced years, was arraigned at the instance of a dapper little dark gentleman, who claimed her as his wife, and charged her with assaulting him in a most spiteful manner with an axe. He did not aver that she actually cut him with it, but only "sheared him out of his senses almost."

Mr Abel Read, for that was the young gentleman's name, stated that his difficulty with his lady grew out of a difference of taste—he liked a nice bit of smoked ham, and carried home a cut for dinner, but she refused to fry the filthy abomination. He remonstrated with her on account of her Jewish antipathy, and tried to convince her, that pork, fresh, salt, smoked, or green, whether baked, boiled, roasted, or fried, was most palatable and savory, and a right Christian dish, the eating whereof was the principal, yea, verily, the only distinguishing characteristic between the Hebrew and the Christian. She replied to his cookery and theology, by vowing she'd make dead mutton of him, with an uplited axe. This was cruel conduct, if true, on the part of Mrs Rebecca, a well-beloved Jewish name, by the by; but there was such a twang in Abel's tone—such a solemnity of manner—such a die-away-sinking-of-the-soul elongation of visage—such a manifestation of spiritual abasement, and lowliness of heart—of too-long enduring forbearance in the whole expression of his outer man—he appeared so desirous to avoid over-stating any thing, that—that his Honor shrewdly suspected he was lying, and so he called Rebecca to give her account of the battle. She commenced her bulletin with the flattering remark, that she was very sorry to say she was Abel's wife; that though a widow, and not only a widow, but an old one, with marriageable daughters, he so pestered her with his pretensions to her hand, that she reluctantly yielded to the fervor of his suit. Said she, "I told him to get along, and asked him what he wanted of an old woman like me. Says I, why don't you get a younger woman; I don't want to get married again—I have had enough of that sort of life, and now I want to end my days in peace; but it was all no use—I couldn't drive him off, and so to get rid of his continual bother I married him, and have cursed the day ever since. He came home yesterday with his ham, and brought no eggs, nor nothing to cook with it, and when I asked him what I was to do with it alone, he began to abuse me, and let me at, and I had to run for my life, and protect myself as well as I could." O, Abel, thou didst look down in the meg, when thou hearest this; thou didst look more abashed than did poor Cain, when accused of the murder of thy antediluvian namesake Abel. O, Abel, how couldst thou provoke a grandmother into matrimony, and then try to make her eat fried ham, without eggs! and baste her to boot. Mrs Rebecca's statement was fully sustained by disinterested witnesses, and she was discharged, and Abel ordered to quit the Court, with the remark, that he ought to think himself lucky that he was not punished himself.

The Banks in the House, yesterday.—As soon as the House came to the orders of the day, yesterday forenoon, Mr Smith, of Mount Washington, moved to reconsider the vote on Mr Foster's amendment striking out the repealing part of the Senate's instructions to the joint committee on the State and People's Banks. The great argument used in favor of the reconsideration, was, that the members of the House had misapprehended the nature and effect of the order from the Senate. The House was extremely impatient of debate, and the motion to reconsider was carried—Ayes, 164—Nays, 150. The question then returned on Mr Foster's amendment again, which was negatively without debate—Ayes, 147—Nays, 166. The Speaker now stated the main question—"Will the House concur with the Senate in the order sent down, for appointing a special joint committee of both Houses, with instructions to report a bill to repeal the charters of the State and People's Banks, with such other provisions and limitations, as in the judgment of the committee the respective cases might require?"

Mr Richardson, of Boston, attempted to oppose the concurrence, but for a considerable length of time, was silenced by most vehement coughing. When the coughing was cured by the monitors, members betook themselves to walking in and out of the doors, and up and down the aisles, and thereby creating just groundswell enough to render Mr Richardson inaudible. The previous question, and the yeas and nays were simultaneously demanded, and questions of order followed each other with great rapidity and some acrimony. Mr Carter, of Lancaster, appealed from the decision of the chair, that the yeas and nays on the main question could not be called for, until the house had decided that the main question should be put. After a brief argument, in which he exhibited considerable feeling, Mr Carter withdrew his appeal, which he only made for the purpose of expressing his dissent to the principle of the decision of the Speaker. The main question was then put, and carried in the affirmative—Ayes, 201—Nays, 131.—and Messrs. Williams, of Boston, Loud, of Dorchester, and Caldwell, of Ipswich, were appointed on the part of the House, in concurrence with the Senate.

Virtue wronged.—The Washington Correspondent of the Courier says the majority of the Senate by a "scandalous and unexampled ruse de guerre" prevented him from "knowing of, or witnessing, and of course from describing" the proceedings on the Michigan bill—but he "trusts he shall yet owe them nothing, though their manoeuvres have once deceived him."—To say nothing of the loss of the world of letters has sustained by this act of the Senate, it is really astonishing that that body should succeed in deceiving so precocious a youth as "Timoleon." The Senate should be reprimanded.

The theatrical season is drawing to a close, and the public have turned out generally to give their favorites at the Lion solid proofs of their regard. Barrymore, to-night, presents a most attractive bill, and will undoubtedly have a brimming house. Mrs Barrymore will again delight us with her elegant and graceful dancing. By the way, when does Darvigue hang out for a benefit? We must not forget him—he is a very clever actor, and has done his part in making the Lion roar (with laughter.)—Above all, he is a Boston boy, and we must take care of our own.

The water in the Merrimack and Nashua rivers is nearly as high as it was ever known to be—but the ice having previously gone out, no damage has been done to mills or bridges.

Much alarm exists among the inhabitants of Dover, N. H. at the prevalence of the small pox among them, five or six cases having occurred. Some of the girls in the factories had left in consequence.

The New York papers estimate the number of petty thieves who perambulate their streets daily, at one thousand.

The charter election commenced in New York on Tuesday, and continues three days. The number of votes polled on the first day was very small.

Vandergriff and Smith, the two forgers who escaped from prison in New York, were recaptured by old Hays on Monday in a house in Canal street.

Fire.—The baggage car on the Providence Railroad was discovered to be on fire, on Tuesday, when the train was within about seven miles of the Providence depot. About half of the baggage of 150 passengers, together with the newspaper mail for New York, were destroyed. The letter mail was saved. It is doubtful whether the fire caught by a spark from the engine, or from spontaneous combustion.

In the Senate, yesterday.—The bill to incorporate the Massachusetts Powder Co., passed to be engrossed. In the House.—A resolve on the petition of B. F. Hallett, for compensation for newspapers furnished by him, was taken up, debated, and passed to be engrossed.

Gen. Gaines arrived at New Orleans, from Mobile, on the 28th of March, and immediately proceeded to Fort Jesup. There were rumors at New Orleans that the garrison had marched to the assistance of the Texans, but no authentic information on the subject had been obtained.

The new steamboat Massachusetts, and the steamboat Benjamin Franklin, started at the same hour, for Providence, yesterday afternoon, at one dollar a-head, passage money.—Jour. Com. of Tuesday.

We can hardly believe this to be true, as the Massachusetts has been laid up for repairs, at Providence, since Saturday.

The Rev. George Storrs has been sentenced to three months confinement at hard labor, in the Pittsfield (N. H.) House of Correction, for preaching abolitionism.

We wish the Greenfield Gazette would not be quite so severe upon us—it makes us feel bad.

The Loco Focos in New York are in full communion with the Whigs. The N. Y. Commercial praises them in high terms.

The North river is open to Albany, and the steamers are now running between that city and New York.

It is stated in the correspondence of the New Orleans Commercial Bulletin, that on the melancholy capture of the Texian fort, Capt. Bowie, shot himself; and Col Travis stabbed himself to escape the cruelties of the enemy. Lieut Dickinson, who had a wife and child in the fort, is said in a letter written by General Houston, to have tied his child to his back and to have leaped from a building, so that both were instantly killed by the fall. His unhappy wife deprived at once of her husband and child, had yet to endure the fate of becoming the prisoner of a Mexican officer.

Earthquake at Amboy.—We are indebted to Capt Furber, of the ship Mary, from Canton, for the Java Courant of Dec. 30th. It contains some particulars of a dreadful earthquake which took place at Amboy and the neighboring islands on the 1st of November. At Amboy the principal shock continued 35 seconds. A great many buildings were destroyed or injured, and many lives were lost. Fifty-eight men, women and children, were killed by the falling of a building inside of Fort Victoria.—Jour. Com.

From Buenos Ayres.—We have a file of the Gaceta Mercantil to the 6th of February. The province appears to be in a very prosperous and flourishing condition, politically, commercially and agriculturally considered. The revenue of Buenos Ayres for the year 1835, amounted to $13,121,540, including $2,000,000 borrowed. The disbursements were $12,028,136—leaving a balance of 93,404 in the treasury.—Com.

Pensacola, March 26.—Naval.—The U. S. sloop of war Warren, sailed from this port on Monday last. The sloop of war St. Louis, returned from the Balize on Saturday last. They found but twelve feet of water on the bar at the entrance into the river, and of course did not attempt to enter.

Augusta, Geo. April 2.—The slave, Katy, on whom the sentence of death was pronounced some months ago, for poisoning Mrs Murren, of this city, was yesterday executed.—Sentinel.

The Tremont was well filled last evening for the benefit of Mr Barry, and the performances went off with great eclat.

MARRIED.

In this city, by Rev Mr Dean, Mr Ezra H. Wright to Miss Mary Jane Wheeler.

In Bradford, by Rev Mr Chandler, Mr Benjamin Page to Miss Mary Worcester.

DIED.

In this city, 9th inst. Lott Wilkinson, 30—formerly of Groton, N. H.

At Hartford, Ct. Mrs Mary Davis, 84, relict of the late Mr Robert Davis, of this city.

At Mayaguez, Porto Rico. 13th ult. Capt J. A. Nye, of Massachusetts, Agent of Messrs R. G. Shaw & Co., of Boston.

In Charlestown, Mary J. S. daughter of Elisha Gunnison, 17. Funeral from No. 3, Town Hill street, on Friday, at half past 3 o'clock. Friends are invited to attend.
